FOREWORD

In gathering and selecting plans and photographs for this book the compiler has followed the principles adopted in the previous volume on "High School Buildings." The aim has been to present a wide variety of buildings which show an adaptation of the plan to the educational work carried on in them and which are characterized by economy and convenience and a careful regard for sanitation, lighting, etc. Preference has been given to buildings distinguished by simple and substantial, rather than ornate, architectural treatment.

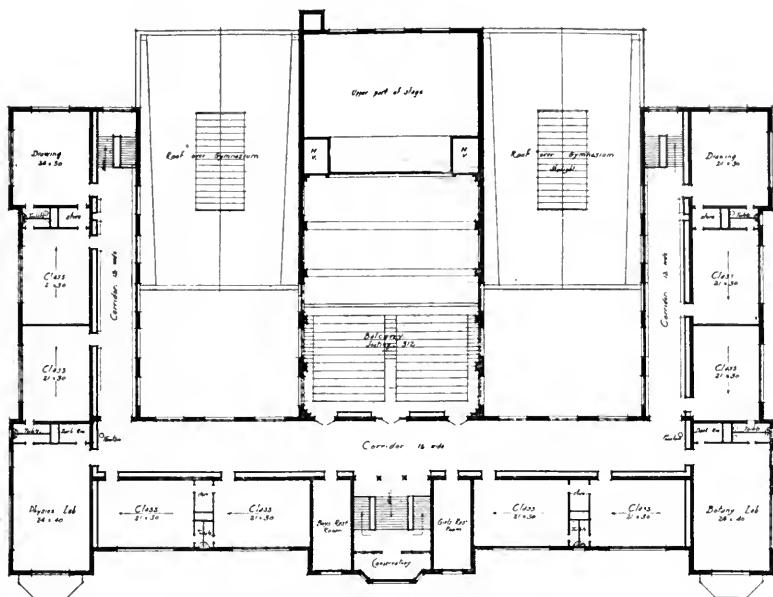

The list of buildings includes the work of a majority of the official school architects of the United States and of many of the leading men and firms who are specializing in schoolhouse work. To all the compiler extends his sincere thanks.
